

A Green Utopia Built By A Fighting Generation by Varnessa Kayen Varlyngton

This is the rise of a new dawn, the next generation of eco leaders - We are generation restoration. Shaping our world with green frameworks for a sustainable utopia that our fathers failed to secure. The past was black but we believe the future is green so with our innovative, green and empathetic mindset we cater the need for planetary health.

We are architecting a green world and while the past was focused on exploitation of natural resources we focus on harnessing technology to safeguard the latter. From our green infrastructures to environmental policies we aim to initiate a symbiotic relationship between humanity and the ecosystem.

Millions of young hands work hand in hand, embracing diversity and collaboration, showcasing our determination to bring Eden back. Together we campaign and advocate as well as conserve and build environmentally conscious lifestyles. We promote egalitarianism, ensure representation and support marginalized communities.

This is why we are called generation restoration - we believe in system change and humane support. I'm proud to be part of a generation that learns from yesterday, fights today and builds tomorrow. I am proud to be part of generation restoration - enlightened, empowered and ecstatic to reclaim paradise.

Generation Restoration, green revival.
