

NDUKA IKECHUKWU KELVIN

Category: Writing (Poetry) Adult

Title: We Grow Back Green

We were born from the ashes of forgotten trees,
Raised in the smoke of dying seas.
Not bystanders to a world undone.
We are the heirs of what must become.

We act now, no time to stall.
With tired hands, we give our all.
We clean the mess we didn't make,
Restore the lands, rebuild the lake.

We speak in actions, not just noise.
The earth is broken, but we're its voice.
We plant where greed once tore apart,
We guard the trees — it's just the start.

No riches handed, no time to wait.
We carry both the hope and weight.
The future isn't some distant dream.
It flows with us through every stream.

We hold the ground where new life grows,
We are the roots beneath what shows.
The future grows from what we've seen.
We rise and fight. We grow back green.

