

Dear Humanity,

I cannot take this any longer.
We were meant for more,
But it seem
Our love was only one-sided.

You thought me old-fashioned,
And in your selfish bid to get me in vogue,
You set my green attire ablaze,
Confiscated my endowment
Leaving me out in the streets—naked.

All you emitted was toxic—
For what I thought we shared
And you wonder why-
Why our conversations become heated,
Or some days,
Why I give you a cold 'shudder'.

You wonder why
I don't shower you with gifts as before...
And when I do, my downpour weeps in pain,
Leaving us worse than before
The waterspring of love which once flowed in my insides
Now wells up in rage-
Not the joy of a greener age.

The butterflies in my belly are gone
Ever since you came crushing the flowers they perch on.
Our produce suffer-
From the desert-ation of our love
And polluted air.

You used me to satisfy your cravings
Threatening my household - wildlife -
In the guise of a better life,
When you never considered a future with me.

Now, it seems you realize your mistake.
I'm willing to start over,
If you're willing.

Love,
Planet Earth
