

In the world many problems have been affecting the earth for many years not only destroying the environment but also harming the creatures within it.

One major problem is pollution which is the contamination of our environment with harmful substances called pollutants. Another problem is climate change, which is a case where our activities cause the depletion of the ozone layer resulting in a general shift in the earth's weather pattern. Biodiversity and ecosystem degradation is also a mighty issue in which people destroy animal habitats, forcing them to leave and look for a new dwelling place.

I would also like to use this opportunity to appreciate and celebrate every organization coming together for the sole purpose of stopping the damage and the dangerous impacts of our human activities in our environment.

In conclusion the solution to restoring our generation comes from us people. It starts with the small things like picking trash from the sidewalk, recycling our wastes and planting trees. If you get the people around you to do this the earth will become better and safer for us all because it's the small water droplets that make up the ocean.
